

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

JOSEPH W. DREXEL

BORN JANUARY 18, 1830.

DIED, MARCH 25, 1888.

Mr. Drexel became a Fellow of the American Geographical Society in 1876, and a member of its Council in 1883. A man of large and liberal culture and especially devoted to music, in which his acquirements were unusually extensive and solid, he was drawn by a natural sympathy towards all organizations for the advancement of science and of art. To these he gave freely of the means which an ample fortune placed at his disposal, and not less readily of his time and his personal services.

Not to speak of his charities would be to wrong his memory.

He was not only ready to respond to an appeal; he sought out those who stood in need, and endeavored so to aid them that they might regain their energy, and take up their own burdens. These things he did without weariness and without ostentation, living with serenity and with earnestness a well-spent life.

At a meeting of the American Geographical Society held March 29, 1888, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted :

Resolved, That in the death of Joseph W. Drexel, a Fellow of this Society since 1876, and for the past five years a member of its Council, the American Geographical Society has sustained a loss not easily repaired. His association with the aims and objects of the Society was a natural outcome of the intelligence and liberal culture as well as of the genuine and active benevolence and humanity, which made him a centre of good influences in the community.

Resolved, That this Society extends its heartfelt sympathy to the afflicted family of the deceased, and that a copy of these Resolutions be transmitted to them by the Secretary.
